About CCTV—

Chatfield Community Television (CCTV) is a service of which the entire community can be proud.

The credit for the success of CCTV goes to the volunteers, the Chatfield Cable Access Board (CCAB), Chatfield City Council, the Chatfield School Board, Mediacom and to Craig Manahan, CCTV Administrator.

Many of CCTV's programs are sent throughout the Mediacom network to 31 other cities in the area. Many programs are shared with Charter Cable Television in Rochester, too, which serves six more cities. An occasional program goes to the Hiawatha Broadband network, in Winona, which adds four more cities to the mix. In all, close to 100,000 people have the ability to watch Chatfield events and to see the credit given to the many fine sponsors who support CCTV.

In November of 2006 the City of Chatfield implemented advanced web streaming solutions offered by San Francisco based—Granicus, Inc.. This means viewing the cable access channel is possible anywhere in the world that a high speed internet connection is available. People now have access to live and archived Chatfield City Council meetings, Chatfield School Board meetings, sporting events and more. Visitors to www.ci.chatfield.mn.us can simply click on the CCTV Live button to either view what is currently airing on CCTV—Channel 11 for real-time video streaming or choose from the selections in the City Council, School Board, Sports, Music, Fine Arts & Community Events or Community Link archives.

The City of Chatfield, through its cable television group, CCTV, will once again film and broadcast many games during the upcoming season. The ability to sustain the service that is provided today is dependent on volunteers. Please consider joining the CCTV crew—you don't need to volunteer for a full year or even a full season, but if you have an interest in helping out in any way, that would be great.

It is interesting to note that, to produce one basketball game, it takes approximately 17 hours of volunteer time and six or seven volunteers to help out. To produce the 80+ sporting events and the many concerts, public meetings, and such, each year, over 1,500 volunteer hours are donated every year by the volunteer camera operators, announcers and directors. To become a volunteer, contact Craig Manahan at 507-696-3070.

The funding for Chatfield's cable television service comes in a variety of forms. In addition to the valuable volunteer time, cash is generated by the franchise fees that are paid by Mediacom subscribers, sponsorships are paid by area businesses and a contribution is made by the Chatfield School District. Space, equipment and other facilities are also provided by the School District, the City of Chatfield and Mediacom.

Ordering DVD's

You may own your very own copy of events captured in the CCTV archives on a standard DVD for playback on your DVD player or your computer equipped with a CD drive and Windows Media Player.
